Week 8: Mid-Summer Checkpoint

There will be times when you need to give your kids a fun activity so you can have a few quiet moments to yourself. Other times, you'll want to gather the family together for some focused quality time.

Either way, there are a variety of fun things you can do from the comfort of your home.

- Browse through the list of fun things to do at Home - Take a moment to look through the free download and pick one (or more) of the activities to do this week.
- Turn off the TV & Put Away Your Phone - These fun activities are perfect opportunities for you to spend intentional, and uninterrupted time with your children. Of course, that means you need to first put away the electronic distractions. So turn off the TV, put away your cell phone and get ready to have some fun.

Our Top Board Game Recommendations

Board Games are great for a number of reasons. First, playing board games is a great way to spend quality, intentional, and uninterrupted time with your children. Of course, that means you need to first put away the electronic distractions. So turn off the TV, put away your cell phone and get ready to have some fun.

Additionally, playing board games give your kids the opportunity to learn how to take turns, be graceful losers and winners and generally be a good sport. This will likely be a challenge, especially for younger or highly competitive children, but these lessons will help them in the long run.
